Tips: Finding work on oil sands construction projects

- Oil sands companies contract construction work to construction companies.
- Construction companies may have contracts with more than one oil sands company. Many construction companies post their job openings on their websites and some only accept online applications. Look under headings such as Careers, Employment or Jobs to find the most current opportunities. Companies may hire some trades through unions (woodbuffalo.net/linksFACTSUnion.html).
- Opportunities for direct employment with an oil sands company are usually posted online on the company's website. Opportunities are for management, engineering, administration, supervision, operations and maintenance.
- Mine equipment operators and process operators will be hired when the construction projects are near completion and opportunities will likely be posted on corporate web sites
- There is also maintenance and turnaround work at operating oil sands mines. Trades work is usually through a contracted service company.
- The Oil Sands Project Report lists all oil sands projects by status (operating, construction) and has contact info for all mine sites.
- For up-to-date information and contact information on oil sands projects, see the Oil Sands Project Report online at woodbuffalo.net/linksRESRepo.html
